10TH SYMPOSIUM HEALTH CARE OF THE FUTURE HEALTH & [E]QUALITY - BUILDING BETTER HEALTH CARE LANDSCAPES

Since 2006, the Berlin based symposium has served as a creative platform for discussions on current developments in health care and their impact on health care facility design as well as the implications for architecture and urbanism. In an interdisciplinary setting, we will explore trends, innovative concepts, and new insights in the fields of "Architecture for Health" and "Healthy City," alongside architects, health care experts, scientists, and policymakers. The focus extends to both the construction of health care facilities and the influence of architecture and urban planning on health and well-being.

The symposium discusses the challenges of fair and humane health care structures in Germany and other European countries. How can we create innovative and future-oriented hospital structures considering current disruptions, such as the planned reorganisation of the hospital landscape in Germany, the increasing shortage of staff, climate change, and the rapidly advancing digitalisation?
